Tunisians have taken to the streets of the capital, Tunis, in a campaign to protest against shortages of basic foods and supplies due to the government's foreign currency policies. The shortage of basic goods in Tunisia, the economy of which was supposed to be recovering, has become worse in recent weeks. There were violent protests after the publication of the 2019 budget of the country, which added up to about 14.5 billion Tunisian dinars (7.6 billion euro), with price increases in certain items. According to the budget, the 2019 budget period will be financed in part by money from the European Union. However, the Tunisian Parliament refused to accept the budget. This has resulted in the resumption of the protests in the streets of Tunis. [Translation] Economic depression Protests were also held on Tuesday in Sidi Bouzid, where the 2011 revolution began, and in Algiers. Last week, the government rejected demands by trade unions to temporarily cut prices for basic goods. Tunisia is in the 10th place in the Human Development Index ranking, with a score of 0.709. It is classified as an emerging market country and its currency is pegged to the euro. Global financial centres In June, the government decided to close offices of several Tunisian banks located outside the country, including branches of the Cooperative Insurance Society, the Banque Tunisienne du Commerce Exterieur, the National Credit Bank, and the Union Commerciale Tunisienne. Concerning the Tunisian industry, the United Nations Economic Commission for Africa (UNECA) estimates that output is expected to be as much as \$9 billion this year. bottom right) a dumbbell shaped SUS (black), an elliptical SUS (orange), a sphere (red), and a plane SUS (blue) with radius $R=10\ \mu\text{m}$. The inset shows how two such spheres can be used to construct a dumbbell SUS. For the parameters of the SUSs, see text.  In the current arrangement, the SUS has two high Q resonators in the transverse plane, separated by a low Q region (sphere in Fig. ). The two high Q resonators can be thought of as dumbbell shaped objects, connected by a rod of lower quality. The separation of these high Q elements (diameter $2R$) is the smallest that allows for the two rod to be strongly coupled, and also the smallest we observe to obtain a sufficiently strong Q . The properties of the dumbbell rod are shown in Table . For $R \ll \lambda$ ($Q \ll \pi R \omega$) this dumbbell rod is a quantum waveguide with a tunable width. We find that the coupling between these two high Q SUSs is controlled by changing the radius R of the low Q section. Property Value
